Hair Tips for Summer!

As the seasons change from dry and cold in the winter to warm and humid during the spring and summer, our hair changes with the climate. Hair often goes from dry and full of static, to frizzy and sun bleached by the end of the summer. Preparing for this change of the seasons can help you have a good hair day all spring and summer long.

- Moisture Balance

One of the hardest things to conquer with hair is correct moisture. Just as you get your hair moisturized to fight the dry winter, it gets wet and humid, and then the sun comes out and wreaks havoc on your locks. As the weather starts to warm up and the humidity in the air increases, it's time to change your conditioning habits. If you deep condition once a week in the winter months, change to every other week. If you use a heavy daily conditioner in the dry season, try changing to a lighter moisture or balancing conditioner. You need to listen to your hair. If you notice static, dry ends, a lot of tangles, or if you are lacking moisture, maybe you need to add a deep conditioning treatment or a moisturizing conditioner to your hair routine. If your hair is limp or oily start cutting back on the conditioner. Ask our friendly staff at S'Kapade about what conditioner is right for you, and how often you need to be conditioning your hair.

- Healthy Highlights

Balancing moisture can be a big issue if you highlight your hair in the warmer months. Frizzy and dry ends on highlighted hair can be more pronounced in the spring and summer, especially if you lighten your hair more, spend time in the sun, or spend a lot of time in the pool or sea water. Protein treatments or protein enhanced conditioners can help restore your highlighted hair's strength. Balance the strength with a good conditioning treatment or even a leave-in conditioner on highlighted hair. The girls at S'Kapade can help you find the right treatment for your hair.

- Manage the Sun's Effects

Just as the sun can be harsh on your skin, it also will affect your hair. You may notice that your hair lightens in the summer. Over exposure to the sun's rays can cause dryness and unwanted lightening to colored and highlighted hair. To keep the sun's effects at a minimum, try a UV protecting shampoo, conditioner, and styling aids. Regular deep conditioning is as important during the spring and summer as it is in the autumn and winter. While you may not need to deep condition your hair as often, a monthly treatment can help keep hair soft, conditioned, and prevent damage. Call the salon to book a relaxing treatment and head massage. You won't be disappointed.

Blast from the Past!

Are you bored with your current hairstyle? Have you had the same style for so long, you don't remember what it's like to look different? Well the S'Kapade girls are here to help! You are more than welcome and encouraged to bring in photos of a hairstyle that you might like to try out. If you are struggling for ideas, why not look back into the past for inspiration? Why not channel your inner 80s diva, or go for something sleeker from the 20s? You never know, you could be the one to start a new trend. However for the meanwhile, why not just try something different. Hairstyles have changed vastly over the past few decades, but there are some that are coming back into style and could leave you looking fabulous! Have a look at some of the styles below, they might inspire you to pick up the phone and make your next appointment at S'Kapade!

1920s

The roaring twenties were a huge time for the evolution of hair, and it left the world with some iconic and beautiful hairstyles. For example, this short bob cut with beautiful, natural curls. Women of the 20s wore elaborate hair accessories, so why not add a flashy headband, or flower clip to spice up this hair style!

1950s

The 1950s 'pin up' look is making its way back into the modern hair circulation. So many people are trying to recreate this awesome look! And why not? It is a fun and fashionable hairstyle, that will be especially convenient as the weather starts to heat up.

1970s

During the 1970's, hair took a more natural turn. Women wore their hair parted in the middle, with exaggerated flicks or curls. This look made a huge impact on hair styling, and is still highly sort after even today. If you're not one for curls, maybe you could try out Olivia Newton-John's timeless girly half-up, half-down hairstyle, complete with brow-skimming bangs.

1980s

The 80s were all about making a statement. The bigger and bolder, the better. However, you don't have to go quite as crazy as some of the women of the 1980s. Why not add a little splash of colour to your hair? Or maybe you could ask one of our talented stylists to tease it up a little or add some waves, to give it that little something extra.
